Similarly, the Principal Ms. Bubaneswari Rao said, 'DAV is different from other academic institutions as it is the missionary school of Arya Samaj and is a memorial school'. She added that as the anglo-vedic school, Havan was necessary to all the stake holders of DAVSKVB who have agreed to go ahead with the mission of Arya Samaj. She also dispelled the myth that to follow the Havan culture doesn't make one part of any religion, she added that, Vedas is above all religion and that it is the course of life. The Principal explained that Havan purifies the environment by destabilizing the toxic gases and helps to recover the ozone layer and has been suggested as one of the treatment method in Naturopathy termed as yagyopathy to cure respiratory diseases, tuberculosis and heart diseases by researchers. It also has been accepted as a psychological treatment method. From the dawn of civilization, people have been accepting it as a part of their culture and count them as pious deeds of mankind. The Chairperson Mr. Anil Kedia attended three days havan programme to worship and observe the ceremony and took tika, blessing and prashad from the head priest.

Similarly, the Vice- principal Mr. Ramchandra Khanal said that the three day Havans were conducted in order to make students culturally strong enough to be good human beings.

Shaping the 21st Century School

There are two main barriers to 21st Century School Development. First, PBL is hard to do well. Second, effective school wide PBL needs a collaborative learning platform to support students and teachers

Ms. Bhubaneswari Rao
Principal

Many literature reviews synthesize published works on 21st century learning skills. There has been a significant shift over the last century from manufacturing to emphasizing information and knowledge services. Knowledge itself is growing ever more specialized and expanding exponentially. Information and communication technology is transforming, how we learn, the nature how work is conducted and the meaning of social relationships. Sharing decision-making, information sharing, collaboration, innovation, and speed are essential in today's enterprises. No longer can students look forward to middle class success in the conduct of manual labour or use of routine skills – work that can be accomplished by machines or easily out-sourced to less expensive labour markets. Today, much success lies in being able to communicate, share, and use information to solve complex problems, being able to adapt and innovate in response to new demands and changing circumstances, being able to command and expand the power of technology to create new knowledge.

The educational technology community knows well how new technology enables students to learn, produce, and construct knowledge. Marc Prensky, several years ago presciently identified the new capabilities of “digital natives,” urges moving from “telling/lecturing” to the “new” pedagogy of kids teaching themselves with the teacher’s guidance” (Prensky, 2008). Others call for a “Learner-Centered Paradigm of Education” (Watson & Reigeluth, 2008), with its accompanying changes in pedagogy, assessment, and support systems.

But how do you make this happen? How do you make new “learner-centered” schools where kids teach themselves with the teacher’s guidance? How do you create a new culture for learning?

Despite the great advances in information and communications technologies, the New American Schools Development Corporation initiative in the 1990s, the Charter School growth in the past decade, and the Gates Foundation’s small-schools investments, one might ask: Why is there not more innovation? The easy answer is that traditional education is too entrenched culturally and institutionally. Every adult knows what school is supposed to be like. Another easy answer is that the standards and accountability movement, while well intended, tends to reinforce traditional teacher-directed, whole-class instruction. While these are factors, of course, is it possible that there is another, simpler explanation, that people have a hard time envisioning, and conceptualizing, true 21st Century education? There have been plenty of articles over the past 20 years, many articulating well what needs to be done, or chronicling good practices. And there are an increasing number of videos accessible via YouTube and other sites that tell the story of new kinds of learning. Still, our experience is that education, civic, and business leaders need to see it for themselves and talk to students and teachers who are doing it.

Walk into a classroom at a New Technology High School, we will see what we call Students at Work—students writing journals online, doing research on the Internet, and meeting in groups to plan and make their Websites and their digital media presentations, and evaluating their peers for collaboration and presentation

At a New Technology High School, we will see what we call Students at Work—students writing journals online, doing research on the Internet, and meeting in groups to plan and make their Websites and their digital media presentations, and evaluating their peers for collaboration and presentation skills. The classroom learning environment also looks different.

skills. The classroom learning environment also looks different. It's double size with a large group of students, two teachers, and a double-block period for an interdisciplinary course. The classroom is populated by worktables, not individual student desks. Every student has access to a desktop or a laptop computer. The tables can be put together as needed for collaborative student project groups, or for workshops/seminars that are teacher-led in response to student need-to-know. The classroom, or student workroom, can also serve as a design workshop or even a presentation space for end-of-project student presentation.

"New school development often flounders because educators are unable to specify what the new learning will look like. Often architects are flummoxed when all they can get the educators to specify is "flexibility," which, of course, is often another word for "we don't know".

There are two main barriers to 21st Century School Development. First, PBL is hard to do well. Second, effective school wide PBL needs a collaborative learning platform to support students and teachers Equipping students with appropriate technology and tools is the beginning, not the end. Computers, cameras, and interactive white boards all come to life as student tools in a 21st Century PBL classroom. Students need these tools to be investigators and producers of knowledge. But they also need 24/7 access to their project information, project calendar, assessment rubrics, and just-in-time assessments. They also need, if they work in collaborative teams, discussion boards, journals, e-mail, and special group evaluation tools.

Underlying an effective 21st Century School is a new culture of Students at Work. Visiting adults to New Tech schools are struck by how mature, poised, and articulate the students are and how comfortable they are speaking with adults. New Tech students speak of a culture of "trust, respect, and responsibility."

The New Tech experience demonstrates that with appropriate know-how and support, diverse communities across the country, in large urban, small urban, suburban, and rural settings, can effectively launch and implement 21st Century Schools. But it can't be done piecemeal. It needs to be put all together:

- Help education, civic, and business leaders envision, and conceptualize, what 21st Century education looks like, by visiting 21st Century Schools.
- Create new classroom learning environments for "a culture of Students at Work."
- Define the school's Learner Outcomes that students believe they need to know and be able to do, embed them in all projects, and provide students just-in-time assessment feedback on their learner outcomes.
- Systematize 100% project learning in all courses.
- Provide ongoing and systematic professional development. Go beyond training to coaching and a professional learning community.
- Go beyond 1-to-1 computing. Provide students and teachers with technology tools plus an online collaborative learning platform.
- Build a new student culture of "trust, respect, and responsibility."

In conclusion, there is much work to be done to incorporate 21st century learning standards and implement curriculum designed to teach to such standards. To adequately prepare – to become school and work ready – students and teachers must learn and share content within the context of 21st century skills. To do this, we will need the support of education policy makers, business, community and family.

And DAVSKVB Family is ever supportive in the educational ventures. I hope all the parents in the country understand the need and support like my parent community. Thank you parents so much for your support, suggestions and co-operation always.

May God bless you all

An Overview: Students Can Build-up a Strong Foundation for Any Career in DAVSKVB

Dear Readers,

The 26th Academic Session began with a 3-day Trikundiya Havan. Chairperson Shree Anil Kedia and Principal Ms. Bhubaneswari Rao in the beginning of the session honored the proficient teacher and staff as a part of extending gratification for the silver jubilee year.

To update and upgrade the organization, DAVSKVB management came up with semester-wise co-curricular calendar separately for kindergarten to higher secondary school. This big step of DAVSKVB has been suggested by the researchers and had already in practice in junior, middle and high school all over Europe. The researchers have made a common conclusion that the school programmes enhance the leadership skills, social and emotional well being as well as physical and mental fitness of the students.

The school has organized numerous talk programmes and workshop for various levels by inviting experts related to different fields. The talk programme has also projected to new paths for different walks of life. DAV cricket and football team have stood champion in various inter-school competitions one after another in the first half of the academic session 2018-19. The educational tour to foreign lands has certainly widened the students' mind.

The victory of DAVSKVB students in various inter-school competitions made every one of us feel proud. The school management committee members along with the teaching faculties have successfully organized orientation classes for Grade V to XII in order to make teaching learning process more convenient.

The fundamental democratic values of the modern society popularly known as a periodic election was held to form students' council in junior, middle and senior school for the academic session 2018-19. The students and teachers unreservedly participated in the election after listening to the speech of the candidates.

DAVSKVB successfully staged popular

Hindi play 'Andha Yug' and introduced another stage act 'Stand-up comedy'. The school has also launched 'short movie screening and critical analysis programme' from this session. The sole motive of these programmes was to inculcate young minds into writing film-critics, acting and movie making.

DAVSKVB students have added another feather in their cap with their outstanding performance in the celebration of India's Independence Day and in 'Celebration of International Yoga Day at Embassy of India, Lainchaur Kathmandu. Festivals and international days had been celebrated with grand success in DAVSKVB. The presentation made by the experts during the celebration has also helped students understand significance of such festivals and prominence of international days.

DAVSKVB has moved a step ahead by organizing 'International Fine Art Exhibition "Splash of Colours" in Kathmandu'. To conduct this programme, the students organized various workshop and training for under-privileged schools. DAVSKVB also partnered with international schools to exhibit the art and craft of the young learners.

Mr. Ayush Kedia, the founder of Shrubs Nepal in alliance with various clubs of DAVSKVB organized environmental awareness programme. He has also spent his valuable time to bring forth this issue.

The school introduced innovative leadership skills, OVTE Workshop and training, physical activities, talk programmes, spiritual activities and also provided exposure for the students to participate in national and international competition.

The school family paid homage to Sanskrit Scholar late CAO Janardan Ghimire who laid the foundation of Sanskrit in DAVSKVB by organizing 'National Level Inter-school Sanskrit Competition'. The school decided to name a new prefabricated building as 'Janardan Sadan' to commemorate him and his deeds in DAVSKVB. The celebration of the birth anniversary of late CAO Janardan Ghimire will be regarded as a customary practice in every academic session.

The school's online news site with its day to day update has now connected to all the parents through Mobile Apps from this academic session. The official social networking sites of the school; facebook, twitter, YouTube are all targeted to motivate and inspire students for positive change and development. The SANDESH, the official newsletter has reached its massive up to 64 pages from this issue. SANDESH is itself the reflection of the School. The school Principal Ms. Bhubaneswari Rao has assured to implement creative writing of the students in the upcoming issues of SANDESH which will certainly bolster the students' aptitude of creative writing.

DAVSKVB School topped Nepal in CBSE Board Results this year with hundred percent results. Following the trend of breaking the results record, Rajat Shakya from Grade XII crossed the records of previous batch. Grade X, SEE and X CBSE results were also laudable as compared to the past. The details of results have also been presented on News. (The readers can see further details in result segment of school's official website -davnepal.com)

The balance has been stuck in both scholastic and co-scholastic areas. DAVSKVB Chairperson Shree Anil Kedia, Principal Ms. Bhubaneswari Rao, must be acknowledged here for sustainable planning, implementation, guidance, monitoring and evaluation, without whom, we would not have gained all these achievements in the first half of the academic session 2018-19. DAV Media Center extends its gratification to all the members of DAVSKVB Management committee, students, teachers, staffers, parents and support agencies who directly and indirectly helped us in bringing forth this issue. We welcome all the positive feedbacks from our readers. Wishing you all to meet in DAV website, DAV news site, mobile apps and social networking sites; facebook, twitter and YouTube.

It's an overwhelmingly pleasure to observe the investiture ceremony programme as the chief guest in your school which was unfortunately not in our time. I wish the kids of this school will be occupying the professions of doctors, engineers, pilots, politicians, police and army officer, etc. Thank You very much for inviting in this wonderful programme of your school.

Nepali schools join in football frenzy

School students and faculty in Kathmandu too are joining in the football FIFA World Cup frenzy. Several schools are participating in the 'Inter-school Football Tournament' organised by Goethe-Zentrum, Kathmandu, in collaboration with Schulen Partner der Zukunft (PASZU) (Schools Partners for the Future) and BKD Schools, Nepal.

Goethe-Kathmandu Director Kathrin Junken said, "Students learn much more than German language in our institute here. Besides learning German grammar and vocabulary, they also learn German culture and traditions. Football is an essential part of German culture and 'Die Mannschaft' (German football team) has won the FIFA World Cup four times while our women's team has won it twice.

"We want to share Germany's football culture with our students. Sport is an amazing forum to build cultural bridges between diverse communities and bring people together."

DAV Higher Secondary School, Janakpuri, Principal Bhubaneswari Rao says, "A career in football journey begins from the school. Our school students participate in various football tournaments and other sports as well. I wish all school students who compete in the Goethe-Zentrum Inter-school Football Tournament emerge as world-class players in the future and make the country feel proud of them. Some day it is dream while others say it is mission impossible, but the road to World Cup could still be 'Mission Possible' for Nepal."

Fifa World Cup Russia stands out for its social responsibility towards the financially challenged children. Last month, a team from Nepal—Shelter Ashraya—participated in the 'Street Child World Cup 2018—Future Depends on You', held in Moscow. This was Nepal's first participation in the event.
