Development of New Technology and its Impact

Excessive dependence on machines leads to an atrophy of their mental faculties. This preoccupation with the “small fellow” reduces their capacity for reflective thinking, reasoning analysis and imagination.

Ms. Bhubaneswari Rao
The Principal

We at DAVSKVB always believe we need a kind of education which paves a path for lifelong learning and directs holistic development while the students are at School. We take every measure to make our students more human than technological. It doesn't mean that we don't want them to be a part of technological advancement yet we take every caution to ensure that they don't get over indulged in it and forget the true meaning of life as per our eastern philosophy and Vedas.

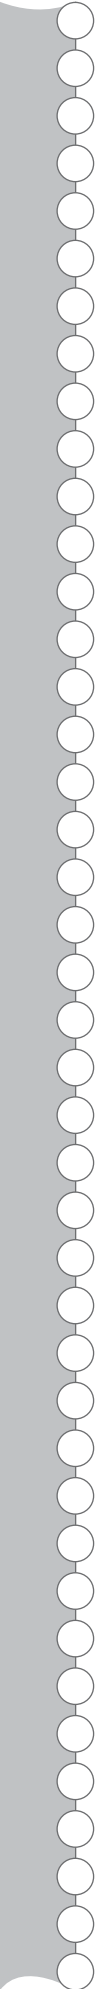

We are in an era where education is in its peak and producing a more engineers, doctors, teachers or business entrepreneurs than required but at the same time the world today encounters more issues than before, be it environmental or terrorism, food security or water scarcity, racism or religious conflicts, poverty or inequality, conflicts or wars. Does this mean that we are producing more educated and technological people with less or no human concern?

Now let's take the trend, the craze, the mania is for Computer Education. From education it has transcended to the level of entertainment. It has started right from the lower classes. Instead of Education it has become an Educational Enterprise. Association with the computer has developed into an attachment and grown into an addiction. The children are hooked to it for hours together to become couch potatoes.

Children wish to have back ground music in the form of a T.V. sound. When they browse Wikipedia or MySpace, what is he doing- his homework while keeping in touch (with whom, God only knows) or is it vice versa. She says "I am doing my project" but sending out e-mails or chatting or texting. In old days parents used to say "no distractions; concentrate on your work" but for today's children distractions seem to be an inspiration. This is resulting in a poorer understanding of the subject for lack of focus.

Some say that the ability for multi-tasking is necessary to survive in the modern world. But research study says that too much thinking leads to overeating resulting in obesity and paving the way for numerous diseases. So, which one is correct multi-tasking or thinking?

If multi-tasking is important, then why is there a ban on talking over the mobile phones while driving? Not without reason or justification. In the classroom the level of attention span is found to be decreasing. The habit of listening is fading.

The modern trend is activity based learning. And they say children learn better this play way method. Fathers don't have time for their children. So mothers take that responsibility. But they are appalled to see that with so many things done at a time; the children take a longer time to complete their work. Educationists worry that we are witnessing 'ADD' (attention deficit disorder) in the classrooms.

Because of the addiction to the new gadgets, children miss their breakfast often, go to bed late, and exercise is a word not found in their dictionary, but research says that those who have their breakfast, sleep a little more (for an hour) are saved from the risk of unwanted diseases. Undoubtedly jogging increases their memory power.

Excessive dependence on machines leads to an atrophy of their mental faculties. This preoccupation with the "small fellow" reduces their capacity for reflective thinking, reasoning analysis and imagination. It is sometimes necessary to have a shutdown of the mind, so that it can be rejuvenated. But now where is the time for it?

The biggest concern is how will this affect them when they go for employment? Will it not make them entirely dependent on external sources rather than on their own internal strengths? Tangential thinking will become extinct because they are just recording data. In our days teachers used to give mental sums but today if we ask a child to add half a dozen numbers he at once rushes to his calculator.

Planning has become a forgotten art. Language has taken a severe beating. Communication has become horrible. A special language-technological language- has been developed, by abbreviating every expression.

When they go for a job, will they know how to write a "self-contained note"? When they attend a funeral will they have words to condole? When they are always in a hurry and patience becomes a concept unknown to them, will they have any other interest in life- an ear for music, a passion for photography, a love for the outdoors, an excitement about nature- all finer aspects which make life enjoyable?

This addiction makes the children highly imitable and unable to relate to elders. Respect, courtesy, compassion, kindness, affection, empathy, understanding, care, concern, sharing, obedience, humility etc have become sentiments, too far away from their hearts because their minds have obfuscated their hearts.

It is high time that the schools and teachers ponder deeply over this malaise-this rot setting into the future generations. With urgency and speed we have to evolve measures to wean them away from these octopuses and create in them an interest for the sublime things in life which add meaning to their existence.

Technology is good; but it cannot and should not replace the true human nature and its subtle personal magnetism. It is this which will shape the child's personality in a holistic manner.

Shall we sit up and think and move ahead with education which will not only able our children to defeat the technological hunches but will keep the human values intact in them, Technological advancements' are essential but not at the cost of humanity lest our children will struggle more than their previous generations despite of having everything around them at one click.

As parents too we must understand our children's thirst for technology and allow them to become a part of it but with complete monitoring and with certain limitations. We must not make an error of thinking that they know more than we as parents do, to give up our authority which will strengthen their freedom with technology and may cause harm to both parents and children together.

May God Bless you all

Technological Development has Further Justified the Need of Value-based Education

Search Engines facilitated by the internet have now established as the extension of books and teachers. Quite surprisingly, the dependency of children in internet interceded information and knowledge has changed the role of teachers to value-based mentors. The teachers and parents have been worried whether their children are getting right information from the internet.

The advancement in communication sector and its effect in teaching and learning process which we are experiencing at present were beyond the expectation to many educators 3-decade ago in Nepal.

But, few visionary intellectuals had marked the present scenario and expressed their qualms. Technological development was supposed to be the indicators of development, prosperity and happiness to the people who believed western model of development and education was the key principle to enrich human civilization towards betterment.

In Nepal, Late Shree Shankar Lal Kedia thought- 'The philosophy of eastern heritage and technological advancement of the west together can enrich human civilization towards betterment'. This thought of school has now become guiding principles of education not only in Nepal and India but around the world as we witness education planners endorsing 'Sanskrit, Yoga, Meditation and Pariyatti' curriculum in the school education. The researchers have reached to the common conclusion that suicides, depression, addiction and disrespectfulness towards the family, society and country were contribution of the improper educational system to much extent.

The Sanskrit literature in particular has presented 'Fourteen Vidya and Sixty-four Kala' which is the root of education whatsoever people may claim. Long ago, the school Chairperson Shree Anil Kedia and the Principal Ms. Bhubaneswari Rao were determined to deliver concrete shape of all these when many things of those 'Fourteen Vidya and Sixty-four Kala' were in exercise in various forms of added curriculum and co-curricular activities of the School. The pundits of education believe that DAV can draw the attention of 'Fourteen Vidya and Sixty-four Kala' around the world and reach with widening communication technologies.

At present, DAV Chairperson Shree Anil Kedia has been researching on why value-based education has been given high priority to the most developed countries around the world now when Nepali society was on their line but turning on the other side and gradually starting to recognize they can stand on their own going back to Vedas to impart 'New Education Order' from the Himalayan. He has been orienting students that the land of Nepal and India is the Open University of knowledge and peace.

Likewise, the Principal Ms. Bhubaneswari Rao has been relentlessly orienting both students and teachers about the impact of Artificial Intelligence (AI) and Robots in the role of teachers. By observing all these developments, she has been suggesting the teachers to change their role to the Value-based mentors which robots cannot perform well. The teachers' role has now changed to tell the application and benefits of information available in the internet to the students.

Smart Classrooms, Online classrooms and PowerPoint based teaching and learning were new practices in Nepal which has now become old-fashioned as knowledge is available in the fingerprint with the wide spread and easy access to smart phones and internet. DAVSKVB Principal Ms. Bhubaneswari Rao expressed her concern about the need of critical thinking skills in junior students' award distribution ceremony to assist students to identify the authenticity of the information provided in Google or internet.

In the first half of the academic session 2019-20, the school observed Vidya Subharambha Havan as the first school programme followed by the major orientation of Grade VI to XII. Anyone can perceived how educators have understood and agreed the role of value-based education at present through the news story.

In the month of May, the Board Results of Grade XII-CBSE, X-CBSE and X-SEE were the brilliant and proud moments for DAVians as DAV topped Nepal in Grade XII-CBSE and X-CBSE breaking all the past records of the school. The diligent and conscientious student Gaurav Agrawal of Grade XII made all of us happy. The Principal has shown positive sign of X-SEE results in upcoming years after the results declaration of X-SEE.

The school Newsletter has reached to eighty-four page from sixty-four pages which is itself evidence to display how students are sharpening 64 kala 'skills' as per their interest. The School Editorial Board is highly indebted to the Chairperson and the Principal for supporting and providing us innovative guidelines in the time of need.

DAV students have achieved outstanding goals in various competitions in India and Nepal and also appeared champion in Chinese language and cultural contest organized by Embassy of China.

On Gandhi Jayanti, India's Independence Day and International Day of Yoga, DAV students were provided opportunity to stage cultural programme and was highly admired by the diplomats of various countries. The victories of Alvin and Araju in various swimming competitions were outstanding and surprising to all the DAVians. The performance and achievements of the students of all the months are impossible to present in this small editorial. Looking forward to more interaction with the parents, guardians and teaching faculties about the education of the children in social networking sites along with our regular meeting in websites and mobile apps, we conclude our editorial duty here.

We are whole-heartedly thankful to all the teachers, staff, students, parents and alumni for your active involvement in the first half of the academic session to bring forth this issue of SANDESH

We always expect feedback from the parents, alumni and all others associated with the school for the betterment of the students.

Thank You All.

They Love and Suggest Us as Their Own Children

Satyam Chaudhary, Grade XII student of 2017 Batch and Mayank Rajgadga, Grade X students of 2015 Batch visited the school to meet the Principal Ms. Bhubaneswari Rao and Vice-principal Mr. Ramchandra Khanal on 5th May, 2019. Both of them are pursuing BBA degree in Mumbai, India, Chaudhary studying BBA at Lala Lajpatrai College and Mayank Rajgadga studies at Narsee Monjee Institute of Management Studies. They are also supporting their family business in Kathmandu. Both of them said, "They often visit the school whenever they are in Kathmandu." They were elated when they fortunately met the Chairperson, Principal and all the DAV family members and had joyous interaction with them. Moreover, they were greatly pleased to find the expansion and growth of DAV. DAV News Cell met them in Principal's Office and unpredictably took their short interview.

1. Will you please tell us the purpose of your visit?

- DAV has inculcated good cultural habit in us. It's just like a child returning home, the second home. We love to share the experience with the Chairperson, Principal and all the teachers.

2. Are there any differences you noted in the school as the student or as an alumni?

- There aren't any particular things to state. We are blessed to have such an inspirational principal. They love and suggest us as their own children and we feel DAV school is blessed with the outstanding faculties with wide range of knowledge and experience to treat any background of alumni.

3. Will you please share some of the experience of your bygone days in the school?

- Satyam: I was a perfect member and Vice-president of Charles Babbage Computer Club and participated in science exhibition when I was in Grade VII and VIII. It was a wonderful experience to make presentation to the visitors and parents. Mayank: Investiture ceremony, I personally count as one of the most motivating factors in my life. Oath taking, carrying the flag, March past and other various activities which are very productive and shows the responsibility towards the society and the country. The inspiration from the high police officer and the School Management (Chairperson, Principal, Vice-principal, CAO, Co-ordinators, SSO) has been a key motivating factor for me to be disciplined throughout my life.

4. What is your understanding of discipline then and now?

- Most of the students, even best students in some instance think some of the school rules are made to suppress them e.g. to make short hair. The teachers in many cases tell the application of the rules but it might not be practical for them to tell one by one repeatedly. Now, we understand keeping short hair will make us approachable in many places. All the rules are made with a cause and we should try to understand them positively and every student should understand it from the beginning.
- ### 5. Both of you are commerce students. Will you please tell us why you choose business studies for higher study?
- We come from a business family. Since the childhood, we have been socialized and raised up in the culture where money talks. We were taught from the childhood the advantage of profit. We thought business studies help us to learn more business skills and it certainly aid in our family business. Our parents also have decided to educate in the school which is operated by renowned corporate personality of the country Shree Anil Kedia who is himself the personality of diverse educational thoughts and multiple business ideas.

6. Now, tell me about the foundation of Business Studies in DAV.

- DAV is very comfortable place to learn corporate culture with its diversity. We have learned most of the practical corporate culture from DAV. DAV is the wonderful place which has been imparting practical knowledge as per the interest of the parents and students. Teachers are also very professional on their subjects.

7. What would you like to tell for the juniors who prefer to make career in business study?

- BBA study is a multidisciplinary subject which deals with overall management from the corporate world, banking and administration to governance along with necessary skills required in those fields. If the juniors have ambition to work in the business field, they can study BBA and MBA as well. We are still studying and we need to learn much more about business field.

8. At the end, do you want to say something?

- DAV is a wonderful place to learn good things. It has good teaching and learning environment on the practical basis. So, students should be prepared enough and ready to acquire the skills and knowledge from the teachers.

- I joined the school in 1998 AD in UKG till 8th Grade. I consider myself unfortunate as I could not complete in my graduation from DAVSKVB because my family had to shift from Kathmandu to India.

2. Can you please remember the teaching and learning attended in DAVSKVB?

- Well, Chairperson Shree Anil Kedia used to come in the assembly time and deliver some motivational stories in the special occasion. I still remember the chapter, 'The Happy Prince' of English subject taught by Ms. Rao. She was my English teacher in middle school. Every experience attained in DAVSKVB

School has big lessons for my life. Now, I am quite happy and amazed to see such huge expansion and all my subject teachers in managerial posts of this great educational venture.

The extra-curricular activities and quality education is quite appreciable. I feel proud to be here. The teachers were open and they used to treat and behave individually to solve our problems.

4. You are studying Chartered Accountancy, what would you like to tell your juniors who wish to become Chartered Accountant?

- For Chartered Accountancy, you should have overall aptitude to learn vast topics of different streams which is connected to the money making business. If the juniors have ambition to become Chartered Accountant, they should humongous preparation and devote themselves to go depth into the field of Accountancy, Finance Administration, Management, Human resource etc. and their inter-connection with various social issues.
- 5. Do you want to say something more to our readers?

Gender Thought: Equality should be given to Become Unequal

Most of the women and even men across the planet believe women were victimized by the men in the past. At the same time, people also believed that women were marginalized and they were made to serve men. The women's movement during 1960's established a notion that women are equal to men. Since 60 years, we have been living in the society where majority of the world population believe that women are equal to men and has been established legally, socially, culturally and financially around the world.

I do not agree with the above stated notion instead opine existential equality should be given to develop and flourish for both genders. I believe the world's tendency of gender understanding is totally a wrong and misleading to human existence. To be truthful, I observe that people will confront more problems than ever by this understanding of equality. I have a big question to those people who have forcefully changed social perspectives that men and women are equal. People understand women are creative, talented and smart like men but this doesn't mean that women are equal to men. Men and women are different from each other and that is a great thing itself. Instead of making women equal to men, I think that each gender should learn from each other and come together so that we can create a strong ground to build beautiful world. Then, why do we often try so hard to be equal to each other?

The nature created men and women in a different way. We should be aware about the different roles that we have with us. Men and women have different capacities which can lead them for accomplishing different tasks in different way or their way. It's all about cherishing the different capabilities. 'An equality should be given to become unequal for both men and women'. Gender equality doesn't mean that men and women are equal but it should be the source from which men and women get equal opportunity to prove their own identities of uniqueness and differences.
